Hallett Cove Preschool

Goals	Challenge of Practice	Success Criteria
Children will develop their skills to represent their ideas symbolically and share these with others	If educators support children to develop their symbolic representation skills by "nudging" their mark making, then children will demonstrate more detailed representations to share with others.	Children develop their ability to express their ideas creatively using different media Children are increasingly able to use detail to enhance their representations of their thinking All children will be able to talk about their representations with increasing detail to share the story of their representation
Children will develop their skills to identify, compare and articulate measurable attributes	If educators plan and provide a range of intentional measurement experiences children will develop their ability to notice, compare and articulate measurable attributes	Children are increasingly able to notice that objects events and space have different measurable attributes Children can use direct and non-direct comparison strategies Children can use non-standard measurement strategies Children can use "measuring" vocabulary including comparative language appropriately

National Quality Framework Priorities	Key steps
Share children's learning progress (individually and as a group) with families	Preparation of ILPs and parent conversations schedule Creation of Documentation Boards for Numeracy and Literacy learning using PQIP foci. Use of an online information sharing platform e.g., Frog for day-to-day learning highlights
Parents contribute to the learning program	Consultation with GC and families re learning priorities for year via working group within parent community Reignite parents contributing to program by sharing skills (and cooking groups if we are allowed due to COVID) Parent feedback about their child's learning via surveys
Engagement with community	Literacy and Numeracy workshop group for parents at the preschool twice per term Preschool Literacy and numeracy focus at Playgroup. Sharing learning ideas with parents Revisit (Covid-aware) Community Night at Preschool
